CITY OF CLARKSBURG

Updates from City Manager, Tiffany Fell

Empowering Local Democracy through Citizen Participation in City Boards and Commissions

Citizen participation in local boards and commissions is a cornerstone of a vibrant and effective democratic society. These bodies play a crucial role in shaping the policies, decisions, and overall development of a city. The city of Clarksburg's initiative to fill empty positions on its boards and commissions holds immense importance, as it fosters civic engagement, diversity of perspectives, and ensures responsive governance.

Participation in municipal boards and commissions helps promote a strong sense of civic responsibility and community involvement. When residents actively contribute their expertise, time, and insights to these bodies, they take ownership of the city's growth and well-being. This engagement not only strengthens the connection between residents and their local government but also encourages a culture of informed and engaged citizenship.

The City of Clarksburg is implementing an improved process to communicate vacancies on city boards and commissions and seek qualified candidates.

The city will announce available positions for one month on the City of Clarksburg's website, Facebook, LinkedIn, and the monthly Newsletter along with an overview, a list of membership qualifications, if applicable, and the deadline for consideration.

Please consider submitting for a board or commission appointment and help be an important part of Clarksburg's future.
